Kim Cohen is a paralegal in Reinhart's Immigration Law Practice, supporting manufacturers that employ highly skilled foreign nationals, among other clients.

From drafting letters and petitions for U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services to preparing and managing immigration forms, Kim draws upon her extensive experience in immigration matters to provide responsive and thorough assistance to clients that include both employers and employees. She also supports the firm's Labor and Employment Practice by assisting with timelines, chronologies and document reviews for litigation cases.

Kim is dedicated to understanding each client's unique needs to ensure their goals are fully realized while offering comprehensive support to their attorneys. She finds personal satisfaction in helping employees on their path to permanent residency.

In her free time, she enjoys reading and gardening.
