Adam Konrad is the managing shareholder of Reinhart's Chicago office and a member of the firm's Corporate Law and International practices. His practice focuses primarily on mergers, acquisitions and joint ventures, and he often serves clients in an outside general counsel capacity, providing strategic guidance on a variety of matters.

Adam has significant experience helping clients from German-speaking countries and Scandinavia enter the U.S. market and successfully manage their U.S. operations. He is fluent in German and travels to Europe frequently to strengthen relationships with clients and local advisers. Adam interned with the Bundeszentralamt für Steuern/German Federal Central Tax Office and the Berlin offices of a large international law firm as part of a Robert Bosch Foundation Fellowship.

Adam works with clients across a wide range of industries, including industrial and heavy equipment, fintech, professional services, medical and diagnostic devices, medical/dental practice acquisitions and manufacturing. He is committed to developing long-term relationships with clients by learning their businesses and becoming personally invested in their success. Adam is a pragmatic and results-oriented attorney, dedicated to ensuring legal strategies align with client goals.

In his free time, Adam enjoys swimming and long-distance cycling.
