Jennifer K. Lien is an attorney in Reinhart's Tax Practice, where she helps clients tackle complex tax matters to better position them for success. She frequently counsels clients on a variety of transactional tax and deferred compensation projects.

Jennifer stays abreast of continuously changing laws and regulations and finds creative yet practical solutions for her clients. She is perceptive and an astute listener, taking the time necessary to clearly understand each client's unique situation and goals.

As an analytical thinker with a keen eye for detail, Jennifer enjoys the challenge of identifying potential tax issues and developing innovative solutions to minimize her client's tax liabilities.

During law school, Jennifer served as a law clerk at a Madison, Wis.-based law firm and completed an internship at the U.S. District Court for the Western District of Wisconsin with Judge William M. Conley.

Outside of work, she enjoys reading, oil painting, drawing and spending time with her family and two dachshunds.
