Matt DeLange Presents During NBI Human Resource Law Program

Reinhart attorney Matt DeLange opened the National Business Institute's (NBI) Human Resource Law: Best Practices and Current Developments program with a presentation on artificial intelligence (AI) on Oct. 9. The online program provided updates on evolving issues in employment law, including AI, discrimination and harassment, wage and hour compliance, employee classification, restrictive covenants, handbook updates and leave management.

DeLange's presentation, "AI in Hiring and the Workplace," addressed the use of AI in hiring and other employment decisions. He also covered bias and discrimination risks associated with AI tools, regulatory and enforcement developments, transparency and consent requirements, and employer best practices for AI governance in the workplace.

DeLange is a member of Reinhart's Labor and Employment and Litigation practices, where he counsels employers on workplace policies, employee relations matters, compliance issues and employment-related disputes. He regularly advises clients on emerging workplace developments and evolving legal requirements affecting employers.
