

New Realities: Labor and Employment in 2021

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=sAEeOVHgTCY>

Members of Reinhart's Labor and Employment Practice presented on a variety of topics affecting labor and employment in 2021 for our annual Labor and Employment Seminar. Our attorneys discussed updates on the National Labor Relations Board, COVID-19, remote workforce issues, payroll tax credits, labor and employment matters related to the Biden administration and notable labor and employment cases from 2020. We were also joined by Elizabeth Brodek, Executive Director of the East Side and Downer Avenue Business Development Districts.

Biden Administration

- Changes in legislation, regulations and other policies we might expect from the new Biden administration
- Who the new administration might look to in order to help shape and carry out labor and employment policies
- Notable Labor and Employment Cases from 2020
 - In spite of the pandemic, many courts continued to publish noteworthy decisions with far-reaching impacts on the employer-employee relationship. This presentation will highlight some of those decisions and provide insight into how they will change the workplace in 2021.
