and individuals in Securities and Exchange Commission enforcement actions and conducts internal investigations for companies concerned with securities compliance related issues. He frequently works with manufacturing, health care, religious organizations, defense contractors and others who are targets or victims of fraud, including government program fraud. Cameli also has substantial experience representing companies accused of wrongdoing by whistleblowers, including in the context of qui tam actions.

Robert S. Driscoll is a shareholder in Reinhart's Labor and Employment Practice. His practice covers a wide variety of litigation-related issues facing employers including claims of unlawful discrimination and/or retaliation, disputes over non-compete agreements and other restrictive covenants, wage and hour claims (both individual and class actions), and he also represents clients in appeals. Driscoll also counsels employers to help them avoid disputes with a particular emphasis on discrimination (including disability discrimination), wage and hour issues, and non-compete agreements.

Scott W. Hansen is a shareholder in Reinhart's Litigation Practice. His work primarily involves resolving complex disputes between businesses or between business and governments where a client's serious interests or ability to survive is at risk. Hansen has been recognized for litigating some of the most complex and high-stakes civil cases in Wisconsin. In addition to his legal work, he has published and taught on a variety of topics such as persuasion in complex litigation, the benefits of mock juries, the use of financial experts in federal, etc. He primarily serves manufacturers in industries of foods, chemicals, equipment and other goods, health care providers and insurers, and/or financial service institutions.

David G. Hanson is a shareholder and leads Reinhart's Intellectual Property (IP) Litigation Practice Group as well as co-chairs the firm's Litigation Practice. For more than 25 years, Hanson has gained first-chair IP litigation experience, litigating patent, trademark, copyright and trade secret cases throughout the country involving mastering technical case facts spanning a wide spectrum including mechanical, electrical and life sciences matters. His practice also involves ERISA litigation, including withdrawal liability matters. He has represented clients involved in materials handling, mining, cloning and gene sequencing, construction and manufacturing, and varied consumer products industries.

remediation and product liability. Peterson also represents clients in tax assessment valuation matters and corporate governance disputes. In addition to his significant trial experience, he has extensive experience in mediation and arbitration. His accounting background allows him to provide clients with creative strategies in respect to the multiple variables potentially impacting a client's overall business goals, plans and objectives.

Jessica Hutson Polakowski is a shareholder in Reinhart's Intellectual Property Litigation and Litigation practices where she serves a wide range of business clients such as electrical and mechanical designers and manufacturers, biotech companies, health care technology companies, software developers, service firms and product distributors. Polakowski regularly appears in the Western District of Wisconsin and works to both advise and assist clients in the defense and protection of their intellectual property rights. She also works with clients to pursue issues related to unfair competition.

Allen C. Schlinsog, Jr. is a shareholder and past chair of Reinhart's Litigation Practice, and is chair of the Product Liability and Safety Group. Schlinsog handles complex commercial litigation and intellectual property cases, but his practice focuses primarily on the defense of complex product liability claims involving regulated products, including those of the mining, pharmaceutical and medical device industries. Over the course of his career, he has gained considerable experience in significant class actions, product liability and mass tort proceedings. As national counsel for several clients, Schlinsog regularly appears in state and federal courts across the country.

David J. Sisson is a shareholder in Reinhart's Litigation and Labor and Employment practices. He is an experienced trial lawyer who has successfully prosecuted and defended clients in numerous trials before juries in federal and state courts, and before state agencies and arbitrators. Sisson's work focuses on resolving disputes involving departing key employees and shareholders in closely held corporations and others who owe fiduciary duties. He helps develop creative theories to avoid litigation and achieve amicable separations even after threats and provocative actions have occurred, including all forms of alternative dispute resolution.

About Benchmark Litigation

Benchmark Litigation is the only publication to focus exclusively on U.S. litigation. Its results stem from the culmination of a six-month research period where researchers conduct extensive interviews with litigators and their clients to identify the leading litigators and firms. Recommendations are based on interviews with the nation's leading private practice lawyers and in-house counsel.

These materials provide general information which does not constitute legal or tax advice and should not be relied upon as such. Particular facts or future developments in the law may affect the topic(s) addressed within these materials. Always consult with a lawyer about your particular circumstances before acting on any information presented in these materials because it may not be applicable to you or your situation. Providing these materials to you does not create an attorney/client relationship. You should not provide confidential information to us until Reinhart agrees to represent you.
