As a shareholder in Reinhart’s Litigation Practice, Shawn Lovell excels at planning for the unexpected, nimble thinking and finding creative ways to tackle new challenges for his clients.

Shawn is a member of the firm’s property tax litigation team – the largest property tax litigation practice in Wisconsin. He primarily handles property tax disputes but is also experienced in litigating real estate issues involving commercial leasing, evictions and contractual disputes. Shawn is tenacious in helping clients resolve disputes with various taxing authorities, including property tax, personal property tax and room tax. He provides legal representation to a wide range of clients, from individuals to Fortune 50 companies.

Shawn inspires confidence from his clients, and his background as a Judge Advocate in the U.S. Marine Corps contributes to his disciplined, professional approach. He successfully defended more than 100 Marines facing criminal charges involving drugs, theft, sexual assault and murder. Shawn continues to serve in the Marine Corps Reserve with the Third Civil Affairs Group.

He views each client’s case as a unique opportunity to find a solution and devotes to each matter the full attention it deserves—regardless of size or complexity. His ability to plan and anticipate – and pivot quickly when necessary – makes him an effective legal partner.

Shawn spends most of his free time with his three young children and wife, and he enjoys duck hunting and staying fit.
