Telecommunications and Energy

Reinhart's Telecommunications and Energy group is well-versed in the unique needs of telecommunications providers and power generators facing close scrutiny by government agencies. Our clients in these complex, heavily regulated industries appreciate our ability to be efficient, innovative problem solvers.

Our Telecommunications and Energy attorneys have experience representing telecommunications providers and energy companies before regulatory agencies and courts. We serve wireless, long distance and competitive local exchange providers, as well as national independent power producers. Our attorneys are adept at handling complex administrative, regulatory, commercial and litigation matters on behalf of telecommunications providers and power generators.

We leverage a vast source of knowledge by bringing together attorneys from multiple disciplines within the firm, including Corporate Law and Litigation, all of whom understand the particular needs and dynamics of the telecommunications and energy industries. Additionally, Reinhart is well-known for representing entrepreneurial, growing businesses, and we also bring this experience to bear in our representation of telecommunications and energy clients.
