Teresa Rose Kulick is an attorney in Reinhart's Employee Benefits Practice, where she brings a client-centered approach to her work with pension plans, multiemployer plans and other employee benefits matters. She excels at synthesizing complex statutory information into easily understandable formats, expanding clients' understandings so that they can make the most informed decisions about their benefits strategies.

A skilled communicator and listener, Teresa asks the right questions that lead her to find the best possible solutions. Naturally personable, she takes great pleasure in providing support to individuals navigating complex legal processes and creating a positive impact in her clients' lives.

Before joining Reinhart, among other positions, Teresa honed her legal skills as a law clerk in the Office of Gov. Tony Evers. In addition, she worked as a clinical law student with the University of Wisconsin Law School's Restraining Order and Survivor Advocacy Clinic, where she developed her ability to guide individuals through complex legal processes during difficult times.

Teresa enjoys hiking Wisconsin's state parks, cooking, and spending time with family, friends, and her senior dog.
